BALTZER & DODDS.

The United States Government has Opened a New Field of Industry.

When the agricultural department at Washington announced the intention of taking fifty new graduated young men and women from the agricultural colleges throughout the country, actually paying them salaries of $1,000 a year, more on the part of the government. The situation was this: There is no school or university in the United States where specialized training can be had along the many lines of research being pushed by the department, so that there was no source from which it might draw when in need of available men. This country is constantly called upon to send out its experts, at higher salaries than they receive here, to South Africa, to Hawaii, to New Zealand, to Japan. The demand is greater than the supply, and to meet this demand it has become necessary to educate other experts at government expense.

But the new profession of forestry is open not to fifty, but to practically as many as will equip themselves. The government will train as many as it can for duty in the agricultural lines, but training for the latter is only possible in the department, while for the former opportunity is wider. There is such a lack of foresters it will be many a year before enough can be produced for the work ahead, and many more years are the profession will be full. The waste and depletion in the timber lands is of such vast and alarming extent the government is forced to take steps toward their preservation.

Take the pine, for example. No tree, perhaps, in the world contributes more to the wants of mankind. The aromatic odor of the pine is beneficial to sufferers from consumption of the lungs, the timber is equally good for building or for cabinet work; the roots and bark have medical and chemical properties—lanthanum is made from them; the bark makes the highest grades of charcoal; alcohol and creosote are obtained from the sawdust, and the sap or gum affords spirits of turpentine and resin. From the Potomac to the mouth of the Mississippi, to a distance of 150 miles back from the sea, this heavy border of perennial green fringes the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

The southern forests of yellow pine constitute the biggest part of the turpentine timber of the whole world. Yet in the United States alone, the value of nearly valueless—the estimate loss of last year was over $13,000,000.

There are nearly 50,000,000 acres of national forest reserve in the United States, and nearly 10,000,000 acres of government forest in the Philippines requiring attention—making another need from afar for our trained men. Besides this, different states and private owners are taking active interest and applying to the forest bureau for similar working plans. The number of foresters being educated at Washington and maintained in the field together to meet the demand is about 100. In time they will become experts, drawing good salaries for work which is apparently limitless, and in a profession where there is no prospect of crowding.

DOUKHOBORS RELIGIOUS FANATICS MARCHING IN SEARCH OF JESUS.

Yorkton, Northwest Territory, Nov. 1.—The Doukhobors army was yesterday at Salt Coast, thirty miles on its way to Winnipeg. Seven hundred men, almost without provisions, scantily clothed, and frenzied with religious mania and in a pitiable state of exhaustion, will attempt to reach that city, the police and the government will not interfere.

For nearly thirty hours the fanatical army has practically fasted and gone without sleep. Hour after hour the Doukhobors have been singing and praying, Thursday night, when with a few miles of Salt Coast, they slept in the open air in the ditches beside the railway tracks. A train of flat cars past them could be seen dimly starting up at the noise from their uncomfortable resting places, or standing stoically in the cold night air, with arms folded and apparently in prayer.

The citizens of Yorkton have only one opinion about the Doukhobors—they say they are madder than March hare, and that they will, if they do not succumb, become uncontrollable.

Before leaving Yorkton Wednesday evening, after an attempt by Mr. Speers, a colonization agent, to stop them, the Doukhobors bought about $2,000 worth of new clothing. As they proceeded on their march their religious frenzy increased, and they threw away hats coats and shoes, retaining only sufficient clothing to cover the body. They were seen on the night on the prairie. Mr. Speers, fearing trains might run them down, instructed conductors to keep a sharp lookout for them.

PETROUS STATE OF WOMEN. The situation to-day is, perhaps, more complicated than at any time since the families started on their weird march. About 1,100 Doukhobors, women and children, many of them sick and exhausted, are huddled like cattle in four buildings in this town. Two of the women are apparently hopelessly lunatic. One proclaims herself the mother of Jesus, and the other writes incessantly on the floor moaning piteously.

Most of the women are poorly clad, and are in a state of nervous debility, as a result of their long march, loss of sleep and lack of food. They were forced into shelter by the officials, but did not break their fast for many hours, asserting that they wanted to live as Jesus did—without food.

The majority said they would continue the march with brothers, fathers, husbands and sons in search of Christ. Their infants are sick from exposure and hunger, and the mortality will be terrible if they persist in their mad intention.

The wilkware of approaching insanity glimmers in many of the women's eyes. Rest, food and speedy relief are necessary to keep the women from a terrible death.

Women with half-starved faces and sunken eyes and skin and bone lay in some instances on the hard beds in overcrowded rooms, with bared breasts. Children of all ages are crowded closely together.

When dressed by an interpreter to do the women aroused themselves with an effort. When the subject of their religion was brought and they were asked their intentions, they became new beings, animated and enthusiastic.

"LOOKING FOR JESUS."

"Where are you going and what is to become of you?" was asked of a good-looking girl, who said she was only 17 years old and a wife.

"We are looking for Jesus," she simply but earnestly replied.

"Where do you expect to find him?"

"We don't know; God is good and will guide us."

"Will you go with your men on the march?"

"Yes."

"You will die if you go on the march in your condition."

"I do not fear. We will die for Jesus sake."

Another place a woman, disheveled and half-dressed, writhed in mortal agony on the ground.

Grouped around her were other women and children, some expressing the most intense sympathy. From tiers of benches were stretched out many eyes watched the progress in the hall a still sadder scene witnessed, for a woman, who was pleading face whose face was not altogether dejected, instantly announced herself as the mother of Jesus. She had an earnest audience, who seemed to believe her story.

Mr. Speers, in describing the march of the Doukhobors, said:

"They came along slowly like a black cloud low down on the prairie, thirty or forty abreast. The men were headed by an old man with flowing white hair. He was in his bare feet and was chanting and waving his hands. Following came the choir, a blind led by two stalwart Russians, who were carrying on their shoulders the invalids.

The progress was slow, and the singing most doleful, but the unusual sound never ceased.

The choir, I was informed, repeated again and again the words:

"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Why art thou so far from helping me and from the words of my roaring? Our fathers trusted in thee early, trusted and thou didst not deliver them. They cried unto thee and were delivered. They trusted in thee and were not confounded."

"Methodically," continued Mr. Speers, "the army advanced toward me. I addressed the leaders, and the only satisfaction I could get was that they were going out to preach Christ."

FORCE MAY HAVE TO BE USED.

"The condition of the marching army could not very well be worse. The fanatics do not speak English, have no provisions nor clothing and have no definite destination. The cold weather may bring them to an accounting, but I doubt it. Their leaders, Odmeroff, Deadroff and Zeborff, should be arrested. Force will have to be used eventually as the situation hourly becomes worse."

"When I asked the leaders how they expected to get food, they replied, 'From heaven.' As no provisions rained down on them before they left here, they seemed disappointed. All they had here apples, raw potatoes and peanuts."

A Doukhobor laborer, who arrived from Winnipeg Thursday, appealed to an interpreter to induce his young wife, who had joined the fanatic, to return to her home at Terpenzie. All argument was in vain, however. The woman was weak and uneducated from hunger and loss of sleep. The crane has separated hundreds of relatives.

The Swan Lake immigration agent has arrived at Yorkton, but has been unable to induce any of his people to return. Only a few, he says, will consent to go back to their villages. The McNott, member of the Territorial Parliament for Salt Coast, wires from that place:

"Five hundred male Doukhobors have just arrived. They halted in Main street and are singing hymns. They camped five miles out last night. They state their mission is to Christianize the world."

H. C. AMBERG.

Some Good Conundrums.

What is it we often tell others to do and can't do ourselves? Stop a minute.

Why are teeth like verbs? Because they are regular, irregular and defective.

Why is a spider a good correspondent? Because he drops a line at every post.

What is that which the more you take away from it the larger it grows? A hole.

Why were gloves never ment to sell? Because they were made to keep on hand.

Why is a poor friend better than a rich one? Because a friend in need is a friend indeed.

Which is the only way a leopard can change his spots? By going from one spot to another.

Why is the Danish coast a bad place to go for a quiet holiday. Because of the sound which is there.

What is the best early closing movement? To go to bed at 10 o'clock and close your eyes in sleep.

What is it we all like to have, but never like to keep? A good appetite.

Why is a cornfield like a galvanic battery? Because it produces shocks.

When is a woman like a newspaper article? When she appears in print.

Why is there never anybody at home in a convent? Because it is a nun inhabited place.

POPE LEO AT HOME.

Leo XIII. bids fair to become one of the wonders of the world. He has celebrated his ninety-third birthday, and if appearances may be trusted, he will have very many more. This fact he rather ostentatiously flaunts in the face of those who come in contact with him. For instance, at the reception he gave on his birthday, he entertained several guests at near length with what he said.

"What is the beauty of my garden that next year I shall receive there, and let a breath of my flowers come to outsiders. Alas! that my grapes will not be ripe."

This was an allusion to his own particular vineyard, which he planted himself and which he keeps under lock and key. "If it is a success," he went on, "my grapes will not be ripe."

The Pope is, in fact, devoted to outdoor life, but can not or is not allowed to indulge in it much. He has now arrived at an age when he no more feels the heat, but is very sensitive to cold, so that when one sees it said in the papers that he can not go to his Summer house, it is not for fear of the heat, but that he may not be exposed to any small change in the temperature, and because once out of the Vatican it is by no means an easy matter to induce him to return, and if he lingers one moment too long the sun goes behind the trees and he runs imminent risk of a chill.

When in a particularly jocular mood he makes reference to the solitude with which he is surrounded, and says he is grateful, but adds, with great appreciation, "They want to persuade me that I am a delicate old man, but my span of years goes to prove that if I am old I am not delicate,"—Fall Mail Gazette.

Clean Sweep.
The Democrats came near making a clean sweep in Kentucky last Tuesday, electing 10 of the 11 Congressmen, and all three of their candidates for the Court of Appeals. The State is now back to her old Democratic strength, which she maintained before the party was torn by actions and divisions. And so Kentucky will stand when the Democracy is united.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT TRUSTS.

Only the Courier's Opinion.
The Democratic party, since 1892, is not opposed to combinations of capital. Such "combinations" in firms, partnerships, companies and corporations, are absolutely essential to the prosperity, development and progress of the country. And democracy would contribute in every way possible to individual and collective prosperity. However, free competition is a fixed principle of Democracy. Therefore, a Democrat believes that any law or policy that prevents free competition, or that gives one class an advantage over another class, is wrong. Hence that a small combination should have an equal chance with a big combination, that is to say that the law should give the big combination no advantage. Whenever any combination gets to be so big that it controls the price of any necessary product, then it can and does kill off any and all competition, and Democracy then holds that the people should be protected. In this there is no enmity to the rich, no antagonism to corporations or to the combinations of capital, unless such results in crowding out all legitimate competition, and then the interest of the people require that they should be checked and restrained for the general good.

THE EXPANSION POLICY.

Only the Courier's Opinion.

Up to the war with Spain, the Democratic party had acquired nearly all the territory that had been added since the original 13 colonies. Hence it was the party of expansion. At the close of the war with Mexico it was bitterly denounced as such. At the beginning of the war with Spain the majority of the people would have condemned the policy of acquiring the Philippine Islands. The Courier still thinks it a wrongful policy. But in the Philippines we have acquired territory from Mexico. Henceforth it is only a question of how to deal with the people of these Islands. The Democracy can not believe in holding these people as perpetual subjects—the Republic can not exact half fee and half slave, as the Republicans used to tell us. The Philippines should have every advantage and encouragement in the pursuit of happiness, prosperity and liberty. The treaty accorded Cuba is a good example. Or the treatment accorded the territory acquired from Mexico. These people are human beings, they are children of the same God we worship, and are entitled to every blessing possibly to be accorded to them.

ALL ABOUT STRIKES.

Only the Courier's Opinion.

It is sound Democratic doctrine that all classes of property and property rights should be sacredly protected and guaranteed. Without such safeguards no political party can serve the best interests of the people, or long enjoy the people's confidence. The smallest property owner should be protected, and so also should the millionaire and the multi-millionaire. The same laws should apply to each, and the full power of the Government should protect each and all alike. But a man's labor is property just as much as houses and lots and stocks and bonds. It is all the property that a vast number of people have. To a legitimate extent it has the same rights to combine as his capital, companies or corporations. Each man has the right to control his own labor, and to combine with others for mutual interests, but it has no right to control the labor of others who do not want to combine or join their unions. When a strike occurs there are differences existing between the operators and the employees. Both sides have rights, and democracy touches that both should stand equal before the law and both be equally guarded. These strikes are always unfortunate, costly and often ruinous. The differences attending them are complicated, so that in guaranteeing the rights of one side you do not infringe upon or injure the rights of the other. Hence, Democracy should favor wise, impartial, independent Arbitration Boards, with the view of preventing strikes, or falling fairly settle them when one is probable that strikes, like many times done away with. Therefore the best that can be done, is some arbitration that is fair, firm and positive, backed with the power of the Government, State and National.

The result of the general elections throughout the United States, Tuesday, shows that the Republicans won, but by greatly reduced majorities. Their majority in the Lower House of Congress was cut down from 41 to 15 or 20. It was in the election of Congressmen that the great interest centered. Up to two weeks ago few Democrats had any expectations of victory, but the tremendous gains that they turned towards the Democrats build up the highest expectations.

The greatest disappointment to Democrats will be our failure to carry the State of New York. The Democrats had a strong ticket in that State, and the party practically united. But while the Republicans carried the State, the Democrats gained in Congress, and henceforth New York is at least a doubtful State.

The Democrats in addition to general gains held all the old Democratic States.

The Democratic party is in better fighting trim now, more nearly united, and thereby gives better warrant for future victories than any time since 1892.

HOW TO LIVE LONG AND WELL.

What one thing do you think is most conducive to longevity? Probably the answers to this question would be almost as numerous as the persons who made them. Ten prominent Boone county (Missouri) septuagenarians and one octogenarian were asked this, and it is an interesting fact that most of these think hard work is essential to long life.

"Indolence exercise is the basis of long life," says R. B. Price, aged 70, president of the Boone County National bank. "If you will save your cook good you will add ten years to your life. Do not quit work. Old age comes on more rapidly to those who are out of active business than to those who work hard."

"Go to bed early and get up early," is the first rule which John Butler, aged 77, would lay down. "Never stop to loaf. Let liquor alone. Wear out, but do not rust out. Liquor and laziness cut many people's lives short."

"My prescription for long life is hard work," says Edward Farley, aged 77. "When I lessen my work I get in poor health."

"These phrases are the dogs," advises Dr. M. J. Boyd, aged 70, the well known Christian minister. "Keep in good humor and you will keep in good health."

"I believe moderate eating is the secret," declares R. L. Coleman, aged 74 years.

"Eat sparingly," says Col. W. F. Switzer, the historian of Missouri, aged 81. "The first essential to longevity is to be organically sound. Do not overeat."

"A good inheritance," in the opinion of Wm. L. Parker, founder of Parker Memorial hospital, "is the surest way to longevity. Men live too fast, although they really do not work as hard as they once did."

"It is generally thought that a quiet life is the healthiest," says the Rev. J. M. McGinnis, aged 72, "but this is a mistake. Pure air, perhaps, is the best thing for health. Business life will not set on a man's health, provided it is systematic."

"I believe yourself and go straight along," is the counsel of L. Carlos, aged 76, a veteran of the Mexican and civil wars. "I don't think there is anything in inheritance as to living long."

Professor C. C. Bradford, who is 75, gives this prescription: "Eat what you want to eat, drink what you want to drink, take care of yourself, and don't worry. I have always taken plenty of exercise and still take it."

George W. Harrell, Sr., aged 76, "Early to bed and early to rise. Don't take anything you can't digest. Exercise all you can in the open air."—Columbian (Mo.) Herald.

A VOICE FROM OLENEY.

(Union City Commercial.)
Ex-Secretary Olney still appears to be the more conservative element of the Democratic party the proper man to head the national ticket if no turn-out nor trickster, but a man whom the people can trust. He would make an ideal President in just such crises as appear to confront us very soon in the solution of the trade and labor problems. Hill is a brilliant lecturer, but lacks the quality of greatness which makes a statesman. They would be impregnable alike to sophistry and allurements of power.

NEW YORK.
The latest is that the State election in New York will be contested on the grounds of gross frauds.

THE CONTESTS.
The talk of contesting the election for Governor in New York and California will probably end in talk. That there was fraud is most likely true, but the unravelling of such frauds is most difficult, and on account of party feeling next to impossible.

Virginia reports a decrease of the English sparrow and her sister states would like very much to know how she does it.

The Philippine war is at an end, and the only question now is whether it has ended for good and all, or has merely started on a series of farewell tours.

STRAIGHT TIPS AS TO LOW PRICES.

Who Started Low Cash Prices In Hickman?

From the day I opened my Cash Grocery Store in Hickman dates the lower prices for Groceries in Hickman. You know that this is a fact. Each week thro' the Courier I have argued to convince the public that the credit system was a heavy burden, and that I could and would show them the advantages of cash trade.
In my sales you know I have proved this to be a fact by actual prices. Others have begun to see facts when I have demonstrated them, and have lowered prices on special articles. Bear in mind that my cash prices apply to any and everything in stock. Therefore come to see me, for if some cut on some special articles, I will meet their prices and may do some better.

FROM THE WORLD'S GRANARY.

(New York American.)

For the first time in the history of Western railway transportation, wheat grown east of the Rockies is being shipped to Pacific coast ports.
Some few years ago such a movement was predicted by James J. Hill as the result of the development of the American trade in the Orient.
Wheat is being bought by San Francisco shippers as far east as Minneapolis, an effort being made to obtain through freight rates by rail to the coast, and in steamer loads to Australia. If exports of gold to Europe from this center should assume any considerable proportions it will be fully met by the incoming gold from Australia, to pay for shipments of breadstuffs.

"It is announced that the Alabama Great Southern Railway will extend its Birmingham Akron service to Meridian, Miss., upon the establishment of fast mail service by the Southern Railway between Washington and Atlanta and night train, Atlanta to Birmingham, November 2. This will place mail into Meridian earlier than ever before and enable connection at Meridian with Alabama and Vicksburg Railway train leaving Meridian at 11:00 a.m., thereby placing mail in Jackson, Vicksburg, Shreveport, and, in fact, all points west of Meridian twelve or fifteen hours earlier than at present. This is another case wherein the Southern Railway gives increased service and better facilities to the people in this section of the country, for by extending this service they do not only expedite the mails, but enable travelers to reach commercial centers much quicker than formerly."
